

Dog Fostering Application Form

Please note we do not allow fosterers to adopt a dog from us within the first year of fostering

Fostering is rewarding but requires a high level of time, emotional commitment and patience.

Fostering a dog means bringing the dog into your own home for a period of time to offer love, understanding and training. During this time you will also be assessing the dog for re-homing. Your role as a fosterer will be to assess the dog's ability to cope with everyday family life and situations. The dog may be nervous or over-confident. He or she may have limited house-training or no basic training skills. They may be expert bin raiders. They may hate cats. They may not be used to lead walking.

Your input is always valued, and fostered dogs have a much better chance of finding permanent homes because we can be more accurate about their needs and with your help ensure that the right home is found for the dog.

A fosterer provides all the daily needs for the dog, as if it were their own: feeding, walks, training, health-care and affection. We will cover all vets costs for any treatment.

A fostered dog may be with a carer for a short time, or for several weeks or months. This will depend on how soon the dog is assessed as ready for re-homing, and whether there is an enquiry from a home that is suitable. FBRGB re-homing policy states that all dogs will be neutered, vaccinated and microchipped, and all potential homes are vetted thoroughly. Fosterers are asked to welcome potential new owners, once vetted by FBRGB, to visit the fostered dog in their home
